Dilmah, Paul Bocuse open international School of Tea:

FRANCE

Wednesday, 18 November 2009

Tea company Dilmah and French culinary cathedral Institut Paul Bocuse have formed a partnership to establish the first international School of Tea.

The school has opened at the Institut Paul Bocuse in Lyon, France.

The Dilmah Tea School is a groundbreaking venture designed to inspire passion in tea through knowledge of the artisanal aspects of tea.

Sessions at the school cover the theory and practice of tea in relation to its manufacture, brewing, presentation and appreciation.

In May 2009 Dilmah launched the world's first consumer and hospitality tea school, which sought to educate professionals in the hospitality and culinary industries – those in the 'front lines' of customer service internationally – the art of preparing and presenting tea.
